Istanbul SGIA passenger traffic grew by 15.5% in February 2018. International and domestic traffic grew by 15.8% and 15.4% respectively. This growth was driven mainly by Pegasus, Anadolujet, Turkish Airlines and Qatar Airways which made up 96% of the total Istanbul SGIA passenger traffic

Overview of traffic

The overall Malaysia passenger traffic growth of 4.7% for February 2018 was mainly driven by the international sector. The 4.1million international passenger movements was the highest recorded for the month of February. The international passenger volume for February 2018, despite only 28 days, is also higher than January 2017 which was the Chinese New Year month. It was expected that the Chinese New Year holidays would drive domestic traffic as well but there was a reduction in domestic airlines' seat capacity offered during the season. This was partly caused by the continued rationalisation and retirement of fleets by some of the domestic airlines. The passenger dynamics during the Chinese New Year season for domestic and international sectors is as per the charts below.

South Asia, North East Asia, South East Asia and the Middle East sectors registered positive growth in passenger movements. There was a 39.1% increase in Chinese nationality passengers during the Chinese New Year period. All the international regional airports registered double digit-growth for international traffic. Despite the lower domestic passenger numbers, the average load factor remains high at 74% indicating existence of latent demand for domestic air travel.

Istanbul SGIA passenger traffic continued to register double-digit growth. The 15.5% y-o-y growth is an encouraging development from the 5.5% decline recorded in February 2017.
